Other interviews conducted included a staff writer and associate editor of the "Daily Egyptian Newspaper" (DEN). These interviews described [redacted] as a deeply emotional and troubled person. [redacted] did not hesitate to call and let his feelings known. [redacted] stated on numerous occasions that the DEN was a government run newspaper due to the fact that the articles written never fully reflected the truth. [redacted] held Senator SIMON's office responsible since the articles usually did not criticize SIMON and always viewed him as a good politician.

[redacted] Senator PAUL SIMON's Office was contacted and apprised as to the current status of the investigation with regard to [redacted]. [redacted] advised that [redacted] has been in SIMON's office in the past and she is aware of his description. On August 29, 1990 [redacted] First Assistant U.S. Attorney, declined prosecution due to a lack of prosecutive merit in this case. Although [redacted] may have threatened Senator SIMON in the past, there were no indications that [redacted] made any current threats against SIMON's life.
